

Operation Railbridge

CONNECTING NEIGHBORHOODS

SCHENECTADY RAILROAD UNDERPASSES

Operation Railbridge is an initiative to revive the nine railway underpasses that recur throughout downtown Schenectady into dynamic public assets. These historic spaces are in various states of disrepair, and currently disconnect adjoining neighborhoods. This project was conceived to creatively address such conditions, connecting the city's industrial history to an innovative future through the integration of responsive art, design and technology. The volunteers and technical advisors to the project are agents in reclaiming underutilized public space that will engage artisans, designers and community stakeholders to re-frame historical connections through creative economy.
